

Choosing the Right Word - Talking about Disabilities -

Words can influence and reinforce the public's perception of people with disabilities. They can create a positive view of people with disabilities or an indifferent, negative depiction.

Here are some general tips that can help make your communication and interactions with or about people with disabilities more successful:

- Use disability or disabled, not handicap or handicapped.
- Put people first. "Person with a disability" puts the focus on the person instead of their disability.
- Avoid statements that make it seem like a person with a disability should be pitied such as "victim of", "suffers with" or "stricken by" a particular illness or disability.
- For specific disabilities say "person with epilepsy" or "person who uses a wheelchair".
- If you're not familiar with the disability, wait until the individual describes their situation to you, instead of making assumptions. Many types of disabilities have similar characteristics and your assumptions may be wrong.

The following preferred words and phrases will help you choose language that is neither demeaning nor hurtful.
